Description: _____

This is where we type a bunch of information at the bottom of a document that basically no one will read. We assume that everyone will read this drabble, but it is so boring that they cannot get through it. And yet, our attorney's say that this has to be included on every document. Oh well! Here it is: We are not responsible for anything that goes wrong with your stuff. If you have a complaint, take it to someone who can help you. We reserve the right to know what we are responsible for, but we don't have to tell anyone what that is.

PC Development Tools

KeyesOverlay comes with development tools to help you import or create overlays and to map your printer data onto the overlay. We supply a print driver, called ImageMaker, that can convert any PC document into an overlay to be imported into the MappingTool. Overlays can also be fully formed within the MappingTool by drawing lines and boxes, and adding headings.

The program will automatically map your spooled file data onto the overlay, for you. You can customize the document by removing or adding fields, changing the location, the fonts, sizes, color and other attributes.

Simple Installation

The software is easily downloaded from our website and installed on any IBM i or iSeries computer.

The PC Development Tools are included in the saved library on the iSeries. It is copied to the IFS and can be accessed there by any PC on your network.

Application Program Interface

KeyesOverlay does not function by itself. It is used in conjunction with KeyesArchive, KeyesMail, or KeyesPDF. It will enhance each of these packages, allowing them to create fancier PDF documents for web publication, archiving, printing, viewing, or e-mailing.

There are no KeyesOverlay API's to call. After creating a map member, for a document, you will code this member name in the Front Side Overlay parameter of a spooled file. When the spooled file is processed by our other products, KeyesOverlay will automatically convert your documents exactly as requested.
